In the period from 1896 to 1906, Mr. Carnegie created the Carnegie Institute and Library of Pittsburgh, to which he gave a total of $36,000,-900; the Carnegie Institution of Washington, with a donation of $22,000,000; and the Carnegie Relief Fund, to which he donated $4,000,-000, later increased to $12,000,000 by gifts from the United States Steel Corporation.

Corporation.

During the same decade he set up the Carnegle Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching, making total gifts to it of $27,000,000, and the Carnegle Hero Fund Commission, with a $5,000,000 gift. In 1910 he donated $10,000,000 for the Carnegle Endowment for International Peace and in 1811 established his largest benefaction, the Carnegle Corporation of New York, in which he vested a fund of $125,000,000.

Mr. Carnegie's method of endownent was peculiarly his own and, indentally, the opposite of John D. Rockefeller's. The greater part of fr. promote the well-being of mankind throughout the world." The same latitude in drawing upon principal was allowed the directors of all the other Rockefeller foundations.

Mr. Carnegie's donations to his philanthropies were largely bonds. Three-fourths of the Carnegie Corporation's funds and a substantial part of those of other Carnegie foundations are in bonds, mainly in the single security of United States Steel Corporation first mortgage honds, most of which mature in the year 1951.

Charter Differs

The Carnegie Corporation's charter also differs radically from those of nearly all other foundations. Containing no provision permitting distribution of principal, the trustees' powers are limited to making sppropriations from income only. In donating such large sums in United States Steel Corporation first mortgage bonds Mr. Carnegie felt convinced that his endowment was a much safer security than stocks. Bonds were stable and supplied a guaranteed income. With all his astuteness, Mr. Carnegie did not for-

of the hue and cry about lobbyists. Sometimes they are counted, or at least an attempt to identify them is made. Some are so well known that they need no identification. They include former figures in Congress.

But there is a larger class which is not so easily defined. At any rate the methods of lobbyists are various and there is an indisposition to condemn "good lobbyists" which means lobbyists for a good cause, while getting after the "bad lobbyists," that is, men who use questionable methods in attempting to get legislation for ends which do not bear the light of day.

The Senate adopted a resolution calling for the registration of lobbyists. the motion picture. If you wish to understand why things are as they are in films, consider the tone of the life of today. The poet said, "Those who live to please must FEDERAL BOARD please to live," and that expresses perfectly the position of the maker sense of the word, it is you, the pub lic, who is the producer of motion pictures. You set the key in which we are to do our work for you, for by indicating at the box office preferences in the way of entertainment you dictate precisely the character of the films that are to be manufactured.

From this broad point of view, then, I agree with those who blame the public for the unsatisfactory nature of many films. Yet I am not trying to lighten any of the burden of responsibility that rests on the shoulders of the men who operate the studios and distribute the pictures. If they do not choose the key they are at least responsible for the artistic merit and entertainment value of the pictures. It would hardly be fair for me to criticize the motives in order that I cannot undertake to sweep off my neighbor's doorstep. Yet I can say without false modesty that I have a conscience about the nature of the film entertainments for which I am personally responsible. But I cannot evade the fact that I am actively a part of this industry, and therefore, subject to the same conditions that affect all other film

DRAFT ARBITRATION CONVENTION VOTED

Preamble Goes Step Beyond League Covenant-Lord Cushendun Yields to Majority

BY WIRELESS TO THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONTY GENEVA-An important stage has been reached in the work of the League of Nations for the organization of peace, for the committee on security has unanimously accepted the text of the draft general convention on judicial settlement by arbi-tration and conciliation, as drawn up by the drafting committee. This was regarded as a triumph for the sup-porters of multilateral, as opposed to bilateral, treaties on arbitration and

The preamble of the treaty is of particular interest, for it appears to go a step beyond the Covenant of the League in stating the faithful observance, under the auspices of the league, of the forms of peaceful procedure it allows of the settlement of all international disputes, the pre-amble of the Covenant merely stating that it is the aim of the contracting parties to achieve international peace by acceptance of obligations, not to resort to war.

Like Kellogg Proposal

The treaty may, therefore, be said, like Frank B. Kellogg's proposal for a multilateral treaty for the prohibition of war as an instrument of national policy, to be a moral ges-ture of special significance at the present time, for it emphasizes the growing sense of nations that war not only ought to, but can be avoided by the peaceful procedure of arbi-tration and conciliation.

So strong is the feeling that this sentiment should take the form of a general convention that Lord Cushendun, yielding to the sense of the majority, gave his vote for the draft treaty. But he explained in the course of the discussion that Great Britain still prefers hilateral treaties for itself, and he poured cold water on the idea that a general treaty of this kind could do anything to pro-

For one reason or another—let us say because her company wished to avoid having this promising young star entirely associated with "yamp" roles—a fourth picture was made with a title that held forth all the promise of being the title that held forth all the promise of being the title that held forth all the promise of being the title that held forth all the promise of being the title that held forth all the promise of being the title that held forth all the promise of being the title that held forth all the promise of being the title that held forth all the promise of being the title that held forth all the promise of being the title that held forth all the promise of being the title that held forth all the promise of the reduction in men and guns that any of the nations would be prepared to make who signed this treaty," asid Lord Cushendun, as he looked mund the room at his assembled colleagues on the security committee. He particularly addressed his remarks to Mr. Markovitch, the Jugoslav delegate, and found himself, in consequence, engaged in a rather sharp argument with Mr. Markovitch, who pointed out that while he regarded an all-in treaty for compulsory arbitration, with effective measures of coercion, as a far better guarantee of peace than the present treaty of the nations would be prepared to make who signed this treaty," asid Lord Cushendun, as he looked mund the security committee. resident of the League of Nation Guardian on the outlawry of war, says: "American opponents of the League of Nations like to describe it as a league for the organization of war, and I am terribly afraid that the way the Kellogg proposals are being received, both in France and Great Britain, will seem to justify this description. The great business before the world today is the abolition of war between civilized nations. The Covenant went a long way toward that end, but eventually, by the counsel of prudence or timidity, left the famous 'loophole.'

"Members of the League are bound not to make war on each other without trying all possible means of a peaceful settlement; Mr. Kellogg's multilateral pact would bind them not to make war on each other at all. This is greatly an extension of the Covenant not a contradiction. Guardian on the outlawry of war out trying all possible means of a peaceful settlement; Mr. Kellogs's multilateral pact would bind them into to make war on each other at all. This is greatly an extension of the Covenant, not a contradiction.

"The only possible difficulty arises in the case of a violation of the treaty. The Covenant attempts to provide for that case by Article 16; the cuttawry proposal attempts no such provision, but leaves it the understood that if one party breaks the treaty, the others recover their freedom of action. William E. Borah's explanation on this point seems to me conclusive, and it is eloquently and cogently reinforced in Mr. Kellogs's dispatch of Feb. 27.

"Again, the League documents speak of an 'aggressive war,' Americans of 'war as an instrument of policy.' Both terms are open to criticism, but clearly both are attempts to deny the same thing—the thing which the protocol tried to define and which the British Government with some show of reason considers indefinite.

The Prime Minister has said: 'One more war in the West and the civilization of ages will fall with as great a shock as that of Rome.' Whether retained until 1981 or sold from time to time, the problem still remains of replacing these bonds with an equally sound investment guaranteeing the same income. The selection of such securities calls for the exercise of the most prudent judgment of financial experts.

The net result of endowing the Carnegie philanthropies with bonds has been to stablise, but not to enlarge their funds. The Carnegie Corporation, for example, has now exactly the same fund with which it started in 1911, namely $135,000,000.

From 1911 to 1927 it voted appropriations totaling $115,507,000, all revenues from its income.

On the other hand, because of their funds being in stocks, the resources of the various Rockefeller foundations have enormously increased.

Bringing the Parisian Idea to Boston

During the week of March 5 we shall give particular attention to the creating of jewelry of individual distinction. We shall show a great variety of unset semiprecious stones-lapis-lazuli, carnelians, aquamarines, amethysts, jade, topazes, crystals and tourmalines of all colors. You may choose the stones that you prefer and we will gladly make a design of any kind of jewelry suited to your type and taste. This is what the smart women of Paris are doing.

They are having bracelets, chokers, pins and rings designed according to their personal fancies, using semiprecious stones to harmonize or contrast with the ensemble effects of their different costumes. We hope that the smart women of Boston will avail themselves of this opportunity to adopt this charming vogue of personal preferences in jewelry.

There is no charge for consultation or designs. It will be a pleasure to endeavor to please you.

Often do we hear the expression
"the priest in politics." But whatever is to be said against the priest in politics, he may, in his own dein politics, he may, in his own defense, claim that as a citisen of a particular country he is entitled, like every other citisen, to hold political opinions and to try to induce others to accept them. That argument would be entirely valid and the priest would be as free—not in his capacity of citizen—to take a judicious part in public life, precisely like a clergyman of any denomination in Great Britain and the United States, were it not for one definite objection: namely, that he had sworn allegiance to a non-French organization whose instructions may be contrary to French interests, or at least to French views. He has subordinated his citizenship to his loyalty to Rome. In the recent discussions in France this aspect of the matter has been clearly pointed out.

Germany was exporting 12,000,000 tons of coal per year more than in 1918 and this was largely due to the discovery in that country of immense resources of lignite, or brown coal, which was being turned into electricity so cheaply as to enable the distribution of current in Berlin at the rate of one-eighth of a penny cor unit.

Nevertheless, he did not despair of the British coal industry. It must be reorganized on sound technical lines, with district selling agencies, and technicians must combine to place standard values on British coal, in calorific value, moisture content, ash content, size according to specification and so on, so that the buyer would be induced to buy British coal not so much because it was British, but because it would be guaranteed to meet his particular requirements.

The authorities are now considering their attitude in the light of Lord Eustace's new figures. The solution which has been indicated by one of their prominent spokesmen is that additional accommodation should speedily be provided for the exceptionally large number within the present age limit expected to be in the top classes in 1933, and that this should then be adapted for the higher leaving age in the following years, when the new age group will be somewhat counterbalanced by a diminution in the number of pupils within the present limits. A citizen will be a better citizen if he is allowed to manage his own business, believes Chief Mipo Strong-heart, of the Yakima Indian Nation, and therein, he declares, lies the key to the Indian question in the United States.

Complete citisenship for the Indian, in place of the conditional citisenship conferred on him in 1924, would admit him to the state and federal courts in his own name in carrying out his business affairs and it would admit his children to public schools in place of separate Indian schools, Chief Strongheart pointed out. These two things he considers of paramount importance if the Indian is to take a useful place in the community.

"If the Indian child is to grow up to work and live in the white man's way, he should have the same schooling as the white child, or better if anything, because he has more to learn," he said. "But teachers in the Indian service are so poorly paid—only $52.50 a month and quavters—that hardly anyone who is competent for a public school position will apply for an Indian school.

"Most of the reservations are inhabited by more white people than Indians, and have public schools for the white children. If the money apent for separate schools were given as aid to the public schools already established, the Indian children would be better taught and would know better how to mingle with white people when they finish.

"The Indian should be able legally to handle his own money and property to have a live and property to have a live and property to have a live in the same and property to have a live in the property to have a live in the property to have a live in the same and property to have a live in the property to the pro

Perhaps his land allotment should be restricted, and the older, untaught Indians be and the older, untaught Indians be cared for as at present, but the younger ones, who have had schooling, should be enabled to learn by responsibility. They might make some mistakes, but they would learn by them, and make better citizens than they have made under 95 years of paternalism by the United States Indian Burgau."

Chief Strongheart was in Boston while filling a number of speaking engagements in New England, as he is a student of Indian lore and an actor of Indian drama as well as its reservation in the State of Washington.

(From the Tacoma News-Tribune) Tacoma, Wash.

HRONGS of shoppers on Broadway, late Monday afternoon, went about their duties blissfully unaware of an impending mishap that was only averted by the heroism of Walter Hartman, a driver for the Pacific Storage & Transfer Company.

Hartman was driving his truck on Market Street when at the intersection of Eleventh Street he saw a Ford touring car careening down the hill. Hartman jammed on the brakes of his truck and in an instant noticed that there was no driver in the car. In less time than it takes to tell about it, Hartman jumped out of his truck, jumped to the running board of the touring car, caught the wheel, pulled himself in, set the brakes of the car and parked it against the curb, less than a block uphill from the thousands of shoppers on Broad-way. Hartman then ran back to his own truck, jumped in and drove away, saying nothing to anybody.

E. M. Redfern, a Seattle business man, chanced to witness the perormance and reported it to the News-Tribune. He gave the name of the company owning the truck. At the company's office when the drivers TWISSLESS TO THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR

"No, it is different," his father told him.

"Oh, dear!" sighed the little boy. Betty Elisabeth looked at his wist-ful face and said: "I would enjoy it more, Daddy, if Brother could go, too,"

Their father laughed and shook his head, as they went along with a small hand clasped in each of his.
They entered by a big door that spun around like a top. Their father gave them each 50 cents, which they handed to a man behind a counter, who flipped them each 10 nickels.
When they popped their nickels into their coat pockets, their father told them to see which could find out first where their luncheon was waiting for them. Cy, remembering the ahining glass counters heaped with attractive food in the cafeteria, was greatly surprised to see not a bite in sight.

Their father laughed heartily at this and said: "Well, you children have put your arithmetic lessons to pretty good use today."

When they were seated at a table enjoying their luncheon, Cyrus said: "It seems like a tairy story having goodles pop out of the wall."

F THE 7396 reports on occupational income received and analyzed in this study, 1267 are from men whose schooling ended with the elementary grades—in a few cases with less than the usual eight grades. Some of these men report large incomes: one claims an income of $61,000 a year; he is 56 years old, a merchant and cotton-seed broker in a large

These two are ex-mples of men of native ability, in occupations which, until recently, were pre-empted by the non-college man, more completely, perhaps, in the South than in the North. Then as follows: Massachusetts, 48 years old, president of his own corporation, who reports an income of $36,000: another Massachusetts man, manufacturing dyestuffs and chemicals, gives his income as $28,000. These are the high men of this entire group—exceptions

H. R. MIXSELL IS DEFEATED

Bows to Milton Baron in the United States Squash Tennis Play

NEW YORK—Harold R. Mixsell, United States veteran champion, and the sole hope of the home club to take the United States championship at squash tennis, was eliminated Monday, in the third round of the 1928 title tourney, at the Princeton Club, when Milton Baron, a pupil of Walter A. Kinsella of the Fraternity Squash Tennis Club, scored a victory over him in straight games, 15—11, 15—6.

All the other places in the quarter-finals went to the selected stars who headed the list, with one exception, due to the default of Hewitt Morgan of the Harvard Club, this place being occupied by J. C. Lyons of the New York Atlletic Club. This section lost C. N. Edge by default also, in addition to Morgan, and another surprise had eliminated W. H. Tevis Huhn, of squash racquets fame, early in the tourney.

Sleverman Plays Well

Frank A. Sleverman Jr., also of the Kinsella group, showed good squash against the three-time champion. Fillmore Van Sinderen Hyde, reaching to 14—11 in the first game, only to lose the game and the next to the crafty Harvard Club star, 17—14, 15—5.

The hardest-fought game brought William Rand Jr., also a former title holder, of the Harvard Club, against Otis L. Guernsey, former football star of the Yale Club, and not until well into the third game was Rand, able to prove his superiority, winning by a score of 15—11, 17—18, 15—9.

Rowland B. Haines, the present title holder, had an easy task to eliminate his clubmate of the Columbia University Club champion team, Jerome L. Kerbeck, winning by a score of 15—6, 15—12. Thomas R. Coward of the Yale Club was also an easy victor, defeating R. Mason Kirkland of New York Athletic Club, 15—10, 15—7.

The play of suron was the best the former Clty Athletic Club player has ever exhibited. He far surpassed Mixsell, one of the craftiest players in the game, in his ability to keep the latter from getting set for his favorite shots, and what few the Princeton Club player succeeded in making were frequently returned, which no other player, even of high ranking, has been able to do this season. Only in the latter part of the strat game was Mixsell able to make any stand at all against the younger player, when he drew up to it after Baron was leading at 14—6 with only one point to go for game, But in the second, when he attempted a similar feat. Baron proved too steady for him, and took the game and the match without an additional point to the oredit of Mixsell, though service changed hands several times.

Rand Overtakes

Rand was trailing in the first game of the match against Guernsey, but

Rand was trailing in the first game of the match against Guernsey, but finally got his shots working to drive the big Yale Club player out of position, and took the first game by a score of 15—11. He ran up a big lead in the second also, 11—1, but Guernsey gradually wore down the lead, and was the first to reach 18. But Rand tied the score at 13-all, on the maxt hand, and then was within a point of victory several hands later, when he was leading at 4—3 in the extra group of five. But a drop shot that came out from the back wall on a drive by Guernsey, just missed the Yale Club player by a fraction of an inch. If it had hit him it would have given the match to Rand. This gave the edge to Guernsey, and he took the game two hands later. But he could not continue with the same power, and Rand carried off the third game and the match with comparative ease, 15—11, 17—18, 15—9. The summary:

AMBRICAN HOCKET ASSOCIATION

DULUTH, Minn.—The league-leading Duluth team of the American Hockey Association encountered stiff opposition here Monday night when the Kansas City Americans held them to a scoreless tie. Advancing only one point, Duluth still maintains the lead in the league standing, with Minneapolis one point behind through a win over Winnipeg Monday night.

The first period was featured by close playing, with neither team taking a determined offense. Both waited for breaks that failed to come. The middle of the second session saw Duluth lead with a strong attack which was met with a solid defense. Offensive plays were frequent, but the majority of shooting was from outside the blue line. With the opportunities to score slipping away from the players, swift sallies into opponents' territory speeded up the contest until, toward the end of the period, tension broke with roughness annearing. Two extra periods slowed test until, toward the end of the period, tension broke with roughness appearing. Two extra periods slowed down with no spectacular playing. Inability to realize on chances to score was responsible for the lack of goals. Both teams provided a stonewall defense which was difficult to penetrate and the admirable work of Vernon Turner of Duluth and Patrick J. Byrne of Kansas City in the goals turned aside all shots. wasn't going to the theater I used to ride my pony round it, because I said I could get the smell of it!"

Shortly before Christmas, Miss Thomas had her first one-man show of stage models for the real theater. Some of these had actually been used as working models and others were individual experiments. The exhibiindividual experiments. The exhibition was held in a gallery on the premises of a theatrical lighting firm which had some new lighting that they wanted to display.

"It was much more convenient for my purposes than an ordinary art gallery," Miss Thomas explained, "because I could get on the spot just what I needed in the way of lighting."

Commissions at Last

Her first commission was to design the costumes and paint the properties for "The Great Big World," produced by J. B. Fagan. Within a year her ideal was realised, and she was engaged upon the design for the whole stage picture, soemes, properties, and costumes, for Miss Phyllis Nellson Terry's gorgeous production of "Stigmata," a play of medieval Italy. Then she heard that Lewis Casson and Miss Sybil Thorn-dike were going to produce Macbeth, and she designed a set and the dresses and asked permission to show them to Mr. Casson. Before looking at them he told her straight away that the designs were already made for the production. Then he went through her portfolio, with the spot the script of a new play by Clemence Dane called "Granite." It was a big jump from the depths of disappointment to heights of expectancy!

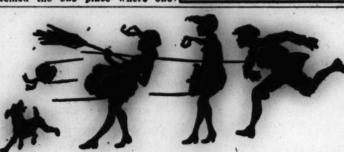

The set designed for "Granite" was one of the models seen by the writer. It showed a bit of an old I twelfth-century house on Lundy Island built from ship's timbers for injecteenth-century use. It was simple in design, depending for its

Island built from ship's timbers for nineteenth-century use. It was simple in design, depending for its effect on the lighting from two lancet windows enlarged to form one big one.

Another model was most appealing, giving the set for a little play written by Miss Werge Thomas and her partner, and called "Out of the Everywhere." It showed a camping scene in which the lighting was gradually changed from dawn to sunset to suit the action of the play.

To which of the four types does your child belong? Is he of the distinctly "emotional" type, quick to respond to every mood, easily swayed, too easily diverted?

Is he like his father, or mother, perhaps, who belongs to the "action" type and finds but little food for mental growth, using every ounce of energy to organise, to keep moving toward some executive goal, and whose leisure is spent in resting so that he may repair the spent energy and accumulate strength for the next "drive"? He will dig up the garden but will never have time to appreciate the harvest.

One outgrowth of this plan is the transformation in terms of paint, pictures and lampshades of the drab rooms in the business district where the classes meet. To these rooms has been given the nomenclature "the Education Studio."

This more flexible program of giving the girls what they want is responsible for the addition of new types of classes. "You see, we don't just sit down as a supervising committee and prescribe a list of courses to be given," explained Miss Madlyn Newell, education secretary of the central branch. "On the contrary, we watch the needs and requests of the girls. When a girl applies at the deak for instruction in the studio."

Projects of educational value, not in the form of class work, have had their origin in the studio. "What is the most interesting thing you have seen in Chicago." This question was sent out by a group of girls under the direction of Jane Paul, who organised the "Know Your City Trips." The answers gave clues about the unusual corners of Chicago. Accordingly, trips were planned to the Chinese opera, the post office, the studio of Lorado Taft, the back stage of the Goodman Theater, the Indian Trading Post, Hobo Land, and other places not so accessible to private individuals. Often these trips are followed by discussion groups. After the Hobo trip, for instance, questions on unemployment and its causes were discussed.

A beginning may be made in the case of small children with such obvious compositions as the well-known "Tailor and the Bear" and "In a Clock Store," Schumann's Kinderscenen and Das Kinder-Buch by Gretchaninoff, later to the poetic mood as expressed in Saint-Saëns' "The Swan," Mendelssohn's "Spring Song" and Andante Cantabile by Tchaikovsky. There is no reason why one should hesitate to use such music as some of these mentioned simply because to the adult they simply because to the adult they seem hackneyed and bromidic. It is neither to the child. It is a part of his birthright that it should become as familiar to him as the sunshine.

Using obvious program music, the composition should be presented entirely without title or comment. Lists of things heard may be made. Afterward these elements are to be as-sembled and combined in an original was mapped out by another group who were first studying only English story. All this offers unexcelled opand who enlarged their schedule to include child study, arts and crafts and interior decorating.

The rooms fairly hum in the evenings with classes of many varieties: handcraft, ukulele, choral singing, journalism, English grammar—41 classes in all.

Projects of educational value, not in the form of class work, have had their origin in the studio. "What is the most interesting thing you have seen in Chicago?" Impression and Expression

In Leading the student to the appreciation of art, be it music, picture, or literature, the process is learning to listen, see and read, the subsequent process being listening, seeing and reading to learn. The accepted methods of teaching reading follow this procedure so unmistakably that for our present purpose any discussion of it may be omitted from this article. Furthermore, in order to serve the purpose of clarity, our story, may well confine itself to the subject of Music Appreciation, remembering always that the appreciation of pictures is amenable to a similar process.

That the coeducational system is the one best suited to prepare boys and girls to be associated with each other in this changing age where men and women are more than ever in close contact, is with Mrs. Ensor an established fact, not merely unproved theory. By coeducation, Mrs. Ensor means not a mere unthinking mass or mixed education, but the education of boys and girls together with a constant active attention to the situations involved.

The adolescent period is the safe and sensible period for hoys and girls to become accustomed to associated clitzenship; and, later, follies, as well as unsuccessful marriages, are less frequent Mrs. Ensor says, in families where the co-educational plan for the children has been followed.

Parents, first of all, need to realize that the New Age is spelled with capital letters. Emphasis for Eight Unfoldment

The task of the parent and of the teacher is the differentiation of individuals, and the consequent emphasis on the factors of environment which must be chosen to make a well-balanced and perfect unfoldment.

Develop the talent which may prove to be genius, by all means, but broaden as much may possible the minds which may become too deeply rutted by the excessive gratification of the single desire.

Avoid suggestions of fear, pride, or inferiority which is so often an outgrowth of ridicule.

Mrs. Ensor commends the group work accomplished in America, and contrasts the strongly individualistic type of teaching which the English child receives. She feels that the new schoolroom methods.

Parents, first of all, need to realize that the New Age is spelled with capital letters. Progress is more rapid than it was during the last generation, and in order to keep pace with the next generation who must inevitably face problems which need serious preparation, the home, even more than the school, must study with intelligent discernment the type of child it is producing, and preparation to meet the future with poise and tound judgment.

The problems of the present are tremendous because the import of the future will be tremendous, and the most encouraging sign of success lies in the fact that there is so great a number of men showing active interest.

Since it is probably true that no large group of people has wished any harder for a reliable chart and compass than have parents, it is a satisfaction to read the helpful statements made as parent to parent in this column. It is quite plain that this exchange of good ideas is a straightforward sort of thing. Almost every letter carries a positive note of joy and confidence. It is rather wholesome to know that so many parents do not look upon the bringing up of children as a hardahp.

There are thousands upon thousands of men and women in this world who have no human children of their own, yet who are strong in their love for children as well as unusually intelligent in their ways with children, and it is no small achievement to recognise—as is recognised in this column—that these folks are on equal footing with those ordinarily known as parents. Too long have parents in general been inclined to give slight consideration to ideas offered by those without children. The step taken by the Parent Column in this regard is, in my opinion, bound to result increasingly in widespread response of a most desirable kind.

Doubtless I am not the only one who has been especially appreciative highly and in the beautiful shelper and the resulting in the beautiful shelper and the control of th a most desirable kind.

Doubtless I am not the only one who has been especially appreciative of the letters written by fathers. Wanting to see more letters by fathers, one way to start the ball rolling is to write one myself. Three of my four children are boys, 12, 13 and 14 years of age. I would like to read of successful little plans, or improved attitudes, worked out by other fathers, so I tell one of mine as follows.

When an adult has an interest in common with a child, valuable ideas can be imparted in the most nature.

Dear Editor:

I'm a Coloradoan and have spent a great part of my life camping, hiking, and climbing in the beautiful anow-covered mountains of the Sangre de Cristo range in southern Colorado. I am very eager to travel in foreign countries. So far I have been in the Southwest, Mexico, and the Northwest. I have an album almost filled with pictures from many countries in the world and would love to exchange scenery snaps, and to make new friends among girls about my own age, 21.

other fathers, so I tell one of mine as follows.

When an adult has an interest in common with a child, valuable ideas can be imparted in the most natural and effectual manner. Through these common interests come companionship that is often rich in quality. This in turn brings trust, respect and a great deal of happy cooperation in the working out of home ideals. With one of the boys I make repairs about the house and build in or on new parts. I never start work of this hind that he is not Johanyes-the-Spot at my side, hardly waiting to be directed. Night after night, upon arriving home, I am scarcely inside the deer before he asks if there is not some job afoot for the evening. With another boy I am expected to be ready to confer whenever some beybood invention is being mapped out—a six-fact vecdes are, small electric contrivance, a tree-hut, and so on. With the third the interest is more in the out-of-foors. Scout projects, long hitses and numerous sports are here the six of the day. With one of them I have an occasional music bour, another one and I have formed to private compact to see to it that the finner house and I have formed the private compact to see to it that the finner house is being any out of the later of the day. ### A Half-Holiday

Miss Binks' half-day-off was a very enthralling occasion. It glowed there in the middle of the week like a jewel, and there never had been, and probably never would be, any storm potent enough to spoil its glamour. "Rain? Dear me!" and out would come the purple umbrella.

Luncheon being over at last, Miss Binks flew up the stairs to her room, and took off the black dress and the white apron and the small frilled cap, and put on the pink dress and the coral beads and the hat with the crushed flowers. She was now a different person: she strutted a bit, and crooked her little finger when she picked things up; she said "Good afternoon, Wellington," and "Good afternoon, Hilds," and bowed and beamed as if the world were here to do with as she pleased! Then the servants' door closed behind her, and the street-wide and enchantingly dappled with sunshine-sped straight on to the gates of the park.

Miss Binks walked slowly under the green arch of the elms, planning her afternoon. First there was shopping! She selected the biggest

"The Light of the World"

In Keble College, Oxford, there is a well-known picture by Holman Hunt, entitled "The Light of the World." This picture illustrates the text in Revelation, "Behold, I stand at the door, and knock: if any man hear my voice, and open the door, I will come in to him, and will sup with him, and he with me." The artist has shown one representing the Christ knocking at a door and bearing a lantern typifying the light of Truth, which, when admitted, dispels the mists of obscurity. The threshold of the door is all choked with weeds, typifying the trials and troubles that seem to beset human experience. Some of the weeds, like many worldly the trials and the seem to be the seem of the weeds, like many worldly the seem of the weeks, like many worldly the seem of the seem of the weeks, like many worldly the seem of the weeks, like many worldly the seem of th

Some of them, we are prone to think, even justify our apparent state of affairs. This injustice, that sickness, or some bit of misfortune has hampered our progress; and if we let these excuses disappear from thought, how will our ill success or our failures be accounted for? In a mental seil impoverished by weeds of fear, discouragement, remorse, and the like, other weeds, such as self-justification in material things and meeting with disappointment after disappointment, have closed their mental deers and hear not the voice of Him who, in the world of the Psalmist, "forgiveth all thine iniquities; who healeth all thy diseases; who re-deemed the like of the strength of the door of con-deemed the like of the door of the many not even have the desire to awake. Christian Science teaches that no one need have his pathway to health, happiness, and prosperity obstructed. These choking, binding weeds are never the planting of the Father. And as one gives up belief in the power of evil, past, present, or fu-ture, to control mankind, the weeds of evil fall away from lack of the only support or nutriment they ever even seemed to have, and they give place to flowers of spiritual understanding, such as courage, hope, pa-tience, and perseverance, which bless all who come in contact with

The teachings of Christian Science, which have the authority of the Bi-ble, have been made practical in the bie, have been made practical in the lives of many who, hearing the "still small voice," have opened the mental door to "Truth, independent of dectrines and time-honored systems" (Science and Health, Pref., p. vii). Thus the way has been opened for the light of spiritual understanding, which reveals God as infinite divine Principle and man as His infinite idea, the "one Father with His universal family" (ibid., p. 577); and Truth is found ever calling to each, "Son, thou art ever with me, and all that I have is thine."

Is it not all part of the same problem that faces us when we years for better civic conditions in our communities? We remain purely negative if we utter means about the maneuvers of politicians, stay at home on election day and fail to do our part in turning the rascals in failing to vote? Certainly we are helping to prolong the life of the very conditions which we deplore. I used to groan every time I saw a tree being uprooted unnecessarily in Hollywood in the course of some building operation. Is not the conclusion obvious? A paying public wants this young start to continue in questionable situations and instructs her managers to present her in stories bordering on the risque. I know this is a pretty harsh indictment, but if you can arrive at any other answer to this problem, I should be glad to hear it. Money talks in the motion picture industry as in every other line of business, and the makers of films have learned to listen.

Styles and Progress

In its relation to the ages the jaxs decade is just an exclamation point. Pessimists say that mankind does not progress, but merely rushes round in circles. They are wrong. History teaches us that styles move in cycles, but that progress is ever forward, imperceptibly slow in movement, to be sure, but always moving like a glacier. You have only to set up a mark beside one of those frozen tion later to discover how marked has been that movement. Just let your thoughts travel back three centuries and see how the world has progressed out of feudalism into democracy.

No, fundamentally people are just as sound as ever they were. In their ferent this century than last, but our inner impulses are as sound as ever. The style in masks has changed, that's all. Men, as of old, have faith in women and women trust men. This is the rule rather than the exception, yet we sometimes lose sight of this lasting truth because of the din made by the exceptions. If this were not the rule civilization would go to smash in three days. So I am expecting the style to change soon. Most of us have been weary of a continual jasz diet for some time. Suddenly the majority, that great majority of you, the public, who are

Write-ups to Sult Because George M. Cohan did not care for the reviewers' treatment of his newest comedy. "Whispering Friends," in New York, he has been taking extra advertising space to tell his side. Cohan's old friend, Willie Collier, sometimes found the reviewers' comments something less than satisfactory and had playful ways of saying so. When one of his farces opening in Boston had a bad press. Willie next day printed large advertisements with hyperbolic comments from legendary newspapers in the suburban towns. His manager, Charles Frohman, once had dimculty in restraining Collier from bally-hooing one of his plays as in its opened on Dec. 31 and the advertise ments were to be printed on Jan. 1 Mr. Cohan says the best reviews he

SOME STOCKS ATTAIN NEW PEAK PRICES

Specialties Play Prominent Part in Market Transactions

NEW YORK, March & (2)—An out-reak of selling in the rubber shares sused only a temporary halt in the oward movement of prices in today's ock market, which was again fea-red by heavy accumulation of the tor shares.

Trading in General Motors common, a feature of the three previous sea-ns, quieted somewhat, although the lock mounted to a record at 148 % ar having dipped to 146 around d-day.

Hupp Motors, in which William C.
Durant is reported to have a large interest, ran up to a new peak at 1%, and there was brisk demand for Packard, Nash, Studebaker, Hudson and Chrysler. United States Rubber. common sank more than 3 points to a new low at 42% and the preferred broke 5 to 83% on fears for the safety of the preferred dividend and rumors of large inventory losses through the recent drop in crude rubber prices.

There was little in the day's news to influence the price movement, although Wall Street expressed considerable interest in the proposed formation of a $600,000,000 holding corporation to consolidate several railroad equipment and electric manufacturing companies.

Call money renewed at 4% per cent.

1966 ## 196 tion to consolidate several railroad equipment and electric manufacturing companies.

Call money renewed at 4% per cent, but loans in the outside market were reported as low as 4 per cent.

In the afternoon recovery, most of the active stocks reached their best prices of the day. Warren Bros., Greene Cananea Copper, International Harvester, Case, Threshing Machine, and American Zific preferred all sold 4 to nearly 7 points above last night's clossing quotations.

The success of the drive against the shorts in General Motors inspired a similar campaign against bear traders in Radio and International Nickel, which railied briskly on heavy buying. The closing was strong. Plain evidence of the recent change in speculative sentiment was afforded by a further bulge in General Motors to 149% in the final hour. A number of specialties also were bid up violently. United States Cast Iron Pipe, A. M. Byérs, Cluett Peabody and Liquid Carbonic gained 3 to 7 points. Total sales approximated 2,500,000 shares.

The foreign exchange opening was marked by an overnight drop of 11% points in Spanish pesetas, which quickly made up 1% of the loss, and sold at 16.78 cents. Sterling cables ruled unchanged around $4.37 H.

Bond prices followed a firm course today, but trading continued in limited amounts. High grade issues attracted only nominal attention and fluctuated in very narrow margins.

The recovery of Seaboard liens, which began yesterday, was carried further today. Consolidated 6s sold about a point higher, while fair gains were recorded by several others in the group. Buying of the new 8t. Paul bonds continued, adjustment 5s reaching a new High.

"Nothing has come before me on the subject." Vauclain asserted, "but, of course, one never knows what may happen tomorrow,"

Mr. Vauclain is a director of Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing, which has had a working agreement with Baldwin for some time in production of electric locomotives, the electrical equipment being furnished by Westinghouse. A Record of Thirty- Five Years There is no better way to judge the merits of an investment security than by the record of the House which underwrites and distributes it. For thirty-five years the House of Hodson has been building a safety record. Since 1993 we have placed with investors the securities of scores of substantial banks and corporations—and of the bond issues included in these numerous offerings to the investing public, none has ever defaulted in any payment.

Participation in profits, along with safety and fixed interest, has been the unique policy of this House. Original investors in one outstanding issue of Participating Bonds have received 56 interest payments and 20 profit participations—totaling 136% in little more than 14 years, with many years of interest and participation ahead and the return of their principal at maturity.

handled in American bottoms is increasing. On a percentage passis, American-flag ships are carrying more cargo than they did in the years 1924-26, when the low-water post-war mark was reached.

Statistics compiled by the United States Shipping Board show in detail the percentages of tonnage handled in ships of various nationalities, segregated as between import and export, and with and without the Great Lakes traffic. Eliminating the latter, and taking only the totals of import and export traffic, the percentages for the last several years and for the first half of 1927 follow:

Total Ocean Borne Cargess

per cent of the total tonnage handled in Shipping Board vessels compared with 11 per cent in the first half of 1927. Averaging the tonnage handled by independent American ships for the period gives approximately 26 per cent compared with 29 per the hands of the purchaser making this impossible of accomplishment in respect to the export traffic in large part, the figures as segregated by the Shipping Board's statistics indicate that approximately half of the import tonnage (excluding the Great Lakes) moves in American-flag ships.

France and the colonies has increased in certain fields, such as potash and phosphates, by leaps and bounds since the war, according to an investigation recently made and published in the local press. Alsace came back to France at the close of hostilities, and in this territory immense deposits of potash have been tapped. France has also been able since the war to press vigorously the mining of phosphates in Morocco. Both of these chemicals are especially useful in the manufacture of fertilizers. Potash, incidentally, is an ipmortant mineral import of the United States. The potash deposits of Alsace were discovered 24 years ago when a shaft sunk 627 meters produced evidence of potassium salt. Exploitation was commenced in 1910 by a

UGANDA—A practical contribution to closer union in East Africa has been made as a result of the opening of the Uganda Railway Extension, which gives the Protectorate an overland route to the Indian Ocean and which is regarded as the most important economic event in line was constructed 30 years ago.

With regard to the question of the federation of the British territories in East and Central Africa, investigations are at present being conducted into the matter by the Hilton Young Commission, appointed by the Imperial Government. There are, it appears, indications that the ambitious schemes for the combination of the half-dozen separately administered British territories between the Zambesi and the Nile are not likely to fructify. Now every potato of grain moved through the port of Montreal during the open season, Montreal during the open season, which extended into December, in 1927. Of the total, 91,000,000 bushels was American grain, an increase of 100 per cent over the previous year's exports of American grain. With the huge volume of business moving through Montreal in 1927, the port again substantiated its title as the world's greatest grain port. The volume of American export grain using the port indicated that the recent railroad rate question has actually advanced Montreal's interests, the bulk of the increased business being obtained at the expense of New York and other middle Atlantic ports.

Was six months ago that shippers decided that the quality, as well as the quantity, of their product demanded more adequate attention and the Maine Development commission, in aiding the industry, recreation and business of the State, pointed the way to new enterprise. The result is the new marketing system. The Maine potato crop now on the market is expected to exceed in value that of last year, which totaled $37,-000,000. About 80 per cent of shipments, it is estimated, are being used for table purposes, the remainder now going out as seed to states along the Atlantic seaboard from Florida up, with other shipments to Texas,

In spite of this scarcity on some lines, buyers still show reluctance to place orders for future delivery very far ahead. One reason is that the reason is so far advanced that it will be practically over by the time he gets the goods from the finisher.

In print cloths the most active trading was in gray goods for quick delivery for immediate finishing. This is shown by the extra price paid for spots and near-by deliveries, as for instance, 64x60s sold at 7%c for spots, but March delivery only brought 711-16c, and April delivery 7%c; 68x72s sold at 5%c for spot, and $9-16c for March and 8%c for April delivery; 80 squares 4.00-yard sold at 10%c for near-by delivery, and 10%c for forward delivery.

THE volume of ocean tonnage handled in American bottoms is increasing. On a percentage passis, American-flag ships are carrying more cargo than they did in the years 1924-26, when the low-water post-war mark was reached.

Statistics compiled by the United States Shipping Board show in detail the percentages of tonnage handled in ships of various nationalities, segregated as between import and export, and with and without the Great Lakes traffic. Eliminating the latter, and taking only the totals of import and export traffic, the percentages for the last several years and for the first half of 1927 follow:

Total Ocean Borne Cargos

Thousands American Foreign
Tear of Tons U.S.S.B. Ind. Brit. Other

American Proportion Increasing Taking the average of the three years 1924-1926 inclusive gives 10 per cent of the total tonnage handled in Shipping Board vessels compared with 11 per cent in the first half of 1927. Averaging the tonnage handled by independent American ships for the period gives approximately 26 per cent compared with 29 per cent for the first half of 1927.

This fact is the more significant in the same of the appeals to marchants.

view of the appeals to merchants which have been made by T. V. O'Connor, chairman of the Shipping Board and others to route freight in American bottoms. While the control of the routing is generally in the hands of the purchaser making this impossible of accomplishment in respect to the export traffic in large part, the figures as segregated by the Shipping Board's statistics indicate that approximately half of the import tonnage (excluding the Great Lakes) moves in American-flag ships.

50,000 Acres, With Production Growing Fast

SPECIAL FROM MONITOR BUREAU PARIS - Mineral production in France and the colonies has increased in certain fields, such as potash and phosphates, by leaps and bounds since the war, according to an investigation recently made and published in the local press. Alsace came back to France at the close of hostilities, and in this territory immense deposits of potash have been apped. France has also been able since the war to press vigorously the mining of phosphates in Morocco Both of these chemicals are especially useful in the manufacture o fertilizers. TRUST COMPANIES The new railway extension in Uganda will have the effect of bringing Kenya and Uganda closer together. There is, however, some anxiety feit in Kenya lest Uganda's native policy be prejudicial to white civilization, though according to Sir William Gowers, Governor of Uganda, this fear is totally unfounded.

The difference between Kenya and Uganda, explained Sir William, on the occasion of the opening of the new railway, was due to hard facts. Both were following the dual policy, but while Uganda was regarded as a native country, Kenya was primarily interested in white settles.

How freight can be expeditiously handled with a free forward and afterdeck with unimforward and afterdeck with unimpeded space for swinging goods into the hatchways has not been explained by the designers of these ships. It appears from the cut that the airplane take-off is to cover only the port side of the ship, but if this were the case, the vessel would always have to be moored to the pier in such a position that she could be worked from the starboard side in loading and unloading.

America Re-enters Service

The steamship America is scheduled to re-enter service on March 31, flying the flag of the United States Lines. The ship has been thoroughly reconditioned, following a fire at Newport News two years ago. She will operate as a cabin-type ship, thus giving the Government's American-flag line in the North Atlantic five ships of this type—the America, George Washington, Republic, President Roosevelt and President Harding. The Levisthan will be the only first class ship of the fleet.

of grain moved through the port of Montreal during the open season, which extended into December, in 1937. Of the total, $1,000,000 bushels was American grain, an increase of 100 per cent over the previous year's exports of American grain. With the huge volume of business moving through Montreal in 1937, the port again substantiated its title as the world's greatest grain port. The volume of American export grain using the port indicated that the recent railroad rate question has actually advanced Montreal's interests, the bulk of the increased business being observed at the experts of New York for table purposes, the remainder now going out as seed to states along the Atlantic seaboard from Florida up, with other shipments to Texas, Louisiana, Mississippi, Alabama, Tennessee, Arkansas, Kentucky, West

Flat Top Tuning Receiver Offers Little Difficulty in Building

Construction of the Camel receiver offers no particular difficulty as the wiring is simple. Since only two tuned circuits are used and these are coupled with a small condenser instead of a tube there is no difficulty to run into from a radio frequency viewpoint as when using straight tuned R. F.

The untuned transformers are a joy to work with, they can be laid out and wired so simply. The audio end, is, too a straight wiring propo-

A good way to get the exect location, is to place the bottom of section of sondenser, using first machine screws. These will past through sub-panel and bottom of shield and hold same in place. If the A-B tuning unit is correctly mounted, it should turn freely and by turning the small knob in center of dial the section should move in either direction a slight degree. sition. When the set is built there is no particular adjustment to work out. It will be found that the coupling concenser should be left practically all out in most cases to give the correct coupling. The two tuned elecutes should be tuned together for if they are tuned separately all sorts of queer coupling effects take place.

After all the parts have been secured the first thing to do is to lay out the front panel. A templeplate is inclosed with the A-B tuning unit and this should be used for drilling the holes to mount the condenser and dial. Drilling of this hard panel material may prove tedious for the constructor and if he will mark the panel where the holes should be made, noting the correct size, he can take it to a professional panel company and have it drilled and engraved at a small cost.

The laying out of the sub-panel is perhams more complicated as the AGNER, Dvořák, Elgar, Verdi, Viclinist; Bernard Ocke, second Viclinist; Louis Kaufman, viclist, and Marie Romaet-Rosanof, cellist. Lucie Caffaret Lucie Caffaret, pianist, recently come from Paris on a concert tour, played at Jordan Hall last evening There an audience of good size responded warmly to her playing, giving her close attention and vigorous applause. Her program, though not designed according to usual patterns, was well balanced in its sequence, and contained a few compositions not too often heard.

not too often heard.

Miss Caffaret began with Busoni's arrangement of Bach's Chaconne, favored piece with planists who cultivate the "grand" manner. She made it vigorous, forceful, and dramatic. Occasionally there were interfudes of lesser intensity, but almost throughout the long work the planist used a tonal paintic of intensity trace. A Tocata on the "Jou du Coucou" came next, grateful to the listener for its delicacy and for the intricately contrived fig-

LOUITING Europe this year

England, France, Switzerland, Italy? The Old World, with its background of history, with its masterpieces, its picturesque villages and quaint customs, is always a delight to the traveler. But are you unacquainted with the hotels in foreign But are you unacquainted with the hotels in foreign cities? When far away from home, when the money, the people, the cities and customs seem strange you can still find friendly hotels—friends whose names have become familiar through their advertisements in The Christian Science Monitor every Tuesday. As you read the advertisements of hotels in the cities which you expect to visit, make a memorandum of the names for reference when traveling in Europe. We believe that your patronage of Monitor advertisers will add to the pleasure of your trip.

What Are Regional Agreements?

N INTERESTING discussion was precipitated at the meeting of the Security Committee of the League of Nations in Geneva recently by the delegate from Argentina, Señor Cantilo. He vehemently bjected to the inclusion in Article 21 of the League Covenant of that clause which declares that nothing therein contained shall be deemed to affect the validity of international engagements, such as treaties of arbitration or regional understandings like the Monroe Doctrine for securing the maintenance of peace. The assertion was made that the Monroe Doctrine is, strictly speaking, only a unilateral political declaration by the United States, and that never, so far as he knows, has it been explicitly approved by other American countries. .Upon this theory, he contends, it cannot properly be cited or referred to as a regional agreement.

This now famous doctrine was enunciated in the message of President Monroe to Congress in December, 1823. The period was a formative one in the affairs of nearly every South American and Central American nation. There had come to the people of those vast regions long under the domination of Spain the realization that they, like their neighbors to the north, might be free and independent. The movement to attain political independence by the assertion of this right had already aroused the defenders of intrenched monarchical and ecclesiastical rule in the Old World. The "Holy Alliance," so called, had been formed to discourage, by whatever means necessary, the establishment of independent states and nations in the New World.

For the purpose of indicating the need of that moral support without which the progress of this reaching out for independence might have been retarded, it may be necessary to review, briefly, the history of the period. The territory known as the Kingdom of Guatemala, later divided into the republics of Guatemala, San Salvador, Handuras Nicaragua, Costa Rica and Salvador, Honduras, Nicaragua, Costa Rica and the territory of Balize, or British Honduras, seconded from the Mexican Confederation in July, 1823. The several states had declared their independence in 1821. Argentina, which had joined the insurrection of 1811, became ndent in 1816. It was recognized by the United States in January, 1823. Bolivia, foli for liberation begun in 1823, declared its independence in August, 1824. Brazil, still clinging to the older theories, eclared herself an independent kingdom in 1822. Pedro I was crowned Emperor in December of that year. The Republic of Brazil was informally recognized in 1889. Chile, after a tumultuous campaign and a succession of political changes, declared its independence in 1818, but was not recognized by the United States until January, 1823. Colombia, likewise after a series of upheavals and changes in boundaries, was recognized in 1825. Ecuador became independent in 1831. Paraguay was recognized as republic in 1852. The independence of Peru was declared in 1821. Uruguay declared its indeence in 1825 and was recognized by the United States in 1828. Until November, 1829, Venezuela formed part of the Republic of Colombia. It was recognized as an independent nation

These brief statements summarize in a few words the history of a tremendously important epoch in the progress of the people of a vast and potentially rich territory toward absolute political and industrial independence. It may be a fact, as Señor Cantilo has asserted, that the Monroe Doctrine has never been explicitly approved by the countries of the Western Hemihere outside the United States. But it was not until quite recently-in fact, not until a century had elapsed—that it was sought to differentiate between the passive acceptance of the protection vouchsafed and the technical or specific acceptance to which the Argentinean delegate refers.

During that century the absolute independence of the nations for whom he professes to speak has been established. It is not made to appear that the policy of the United States in its dealings with those countries has changed since the enunciation of that policy by President Monroe. Would it not seem, in view of the benefits admittedly enjoyed, the protection given in time of actual need when the integrity of the new nations was seriously threatened by a hostile political and ecclesiastical alliance, that there has been more than a merely passive acceptance of that policy?

Frankness With a Purpose

FIRST glance at the reports of Ambassador A Herrick's Washington's Birthday speech in Paris, in which he reproved a portion of the ropean press for its failure to interpret Amer-European press for its failure to interpret American aims at the recent Havana conference of the Pan-American Union, might lead one to think he had been unwise in his remarks. Yet, it may well be asked, how is clarification of international affairs to proceed if no one has the courage to get at the truth of just such situations? The continual attempts made recently by certain sections of the European press to picture the United States' motives in South America as selfish and imperialistic have been most unfortunate and have caused a great deal of unnecessary trouble and confusion.

At the beginning of the Havana conference it was freely said that certain European interests made no secret of their satisfaction at the prospect of the conference splitting on the intervention and other issues. A conference of the American nations by themselves was reported as not to their liking. Moreover, Ambas-sador Herrick in his speech said that everyone interested in the welfare of the Pan-American Union was quite naturally apprehensive at the start that fundamental difficulties might arise which would affect the future of that organi-

"There were differences there," he is reported as having said, "as there would be here. But to me the great thing is that we do get together and do discuss whatever concerns our continent in an atmosphere of peace instead of conflict, and seek in friendly spirit to arrive at the con-clusions of benefit to all."

Misunderstanding, it cannot be doubted, is largely responsible for strife between nations. But the elevating of individual national aims must continue, and such frank utterances as that of Ambassador Herrick will greatly aid in

Exchanging Power for Dignity

THE appointment of Sir William Tyrrell as British Ambassador to France will serve to direct attention again to the increasing importance of the permanent undersecretaryship of state for foreign affairs. The precedent now seems to be firmly established that the official holding this post is entitled, if he so desires, to one of the major ambassadorships. Such change of post, however, is a promotion only in title and not in power, for the permanent Undersecretary of State for Foreign Affairs is in Great Britain an official who wields tremendous influence. Holding over from administration to administration, more conversant with current diplomatic problems than the cabinet minister himself can be, the undersecretary has frequently exerted a decisive influence in foreign policy. The precedent of ambassadorial promotion hardly began before 1889, when Sir Julian, afterward Lord, Pauncefote shifted from the undersecretaryship to the embassy at Washington. He is known to Americans as one of the signers of the Hay-Pauncefote Treaty. Lord Currie, who succeeded Lord Pauncefote in the Foreign Office, became in 1894 Ambassador to Constantinople and subsequently to Rome. His place was taken by Lord Sanderson, who retired in 1906. Then came Sir Charles Hardinge, one of the best-known undersecretaries, for he accompanied Edward VII on several of his European visits. Diplomatic conversations by Edward VII without a responsible cabinet minister present caused much fluttering in the constitutional dovecotes. Later Sir Charles Hardinge (as Lord Hardinge of Penshurst) became Viceroy of India and Ambassador to France; Sir Arthur Nicholson was permanent Undersecretary when the war broke out; Sir Eyre Crowe was Assistant Secretary and Sir William Tyrrell was private secretary to Sir Edward Grey. Any reader of the recently published British documents on the origins of the war will know how influential this triumvirate was and how rarely Sir Edward Grey questioned the advice given him. All three of these permanent officials had had extensive experience.

Permanent officials in foreign offices have been important on the continent of Europe. The most notorious one was probably Baron von Holstein, the "eminence grise" and "the mystery man" of the German Foreign Office. His influence was extraordinary and contributed largely to German suspicions of England. In France Phillippe Bertholot has been for years, except for an occasional interregnum. the Secretary-General of the Ministry of Foreign Affairs.

A permanent official has been described as person who exchanges dignity for power. His political chief, who is the cabinet minister, occupies the public stage. The permanent official's work is not public, but it frequently determines the decisions of the minister himself. The British precedent of appointing undersecretaries to ambassadorships shows that, although they may have exchanged dignity for power, they may later exchange power for dignity.

Iceland Out for Complete Freedom

THOUGH united with the Kingdom of Denmark by but the single tie of a common sovereign and left free to act wholly on its own responsibility in matters of legislation and other things pertaining to its government, Iceland nevertheless appears to feel that a restraint is being put upon its freedom as an independent nation. For this reason it is making ready to sever its union with the country with which it has been connected for nearly 500 years.

As a first step in that direction, the Icelandic Parliament in the capital, Reykjavik, has been discussing the question of denouncing the Dano-Icelandic Union Act, and the speakers of the various parties, headed by Premier Thorhallsson, agreed that the year 1940 would be the propitious moment for such action. Evidently the pact of 1918, which gave complete liberty of action to the Icelanders under the rule of Christian X, was not enough to satisfy their political aspirations. No doubt the dis tance that separates Iceland from Denmark has had much to do with the peoples of the two countries failing to understand each other at all times. If complete independence is to prove a greater benefit to the isolated country in the North Sea, it may be expected that the Danes will place no obstacles in the way for Iceland to control its destiny as a nation without a single impediment to hamper its ambitions. With its population of no more than 100,000, Iceland would, however, as entirely independent, be confronted with problems that it is assumed have been reckoned with in advance of its separation from Denmark. But on the other hand it must be admitted that direct nic benefits have never accrued to the celanders as desired by them from the Danish onnection. Whether something better is to arise from what Iceland has in view politically, is for the future to say. In spite of the small-ness of its population, the country has produced men and women of exceptional ability, and in numbers entirely out of proportion to its size, The history of northern Europe allots a chapter of exceptional colorfulness and prog-ress to Iceland and its people. Of discoverers, statesmen, writers, musicians, natural scientists, in almost every avenue of endeavor, Iceland has contributed its share, and can enter the family of nations with the proud conviction that its past is the guarantor for its future.

Unconfirmed reports have associated Iceland's desire for freedom with the efforts of some of the powers to gain a foothold in the country through enterprises of both a political and economic nature. According to a German newspaper, England is endeavoring to make Iceland a North Sea station for its fleet. But to all such rumors the Icelandic minister in Copenhagen, Sveinn Bjornsson, returns a categorical answer that there is no foundation in fact for such reports. Iceland may not refuse foreign cooperation for the development of its natural resources, but once independent in every sense of the word, no outside powers will be allowed control whatsoever, if the Icelanders have any say in the matter.

Should the policy of severance be made effective it can be taken for granted that no change in the present amicable relations with Denmark is contemplated. The descendants of the viking race will aim to make themselves worthy of whatever trust the world may repose in their suzerainty.

Is School Debating Insincere?

NOT a few persons have been troubled by what seems to be a default what seems to be a definite trend in interscholastic debating, and to a lesser degree in college debating, toward insincerity. The general underlying cause, almost inevitable in the conduct of a state-wide tournament, is an arbitrary and mechanical system of assigning teams to sides. Another factor is the habit of regarding a debate not as a genuine discussion of an important issue, but as a game in which the question serves as a football and the emphasis is upon the winner. A recent discussion of this subject in the Educational Review indicates how deeply at least one writer feels with respect to this matter.

The remedy for the admitted faults of school debating is obviously not in the direction of its abandonment. Like football, debating has too many values for it lightly to be cast aside. If the machinery of carrying on school and college debating in the United States is wrong, it can be changed. If the American tradition adheres too closely to models growing out of court procedure, the parliamentary models of debate common on the other side of the Atlantic can be utilized. If the emphasis is too much upon debating as a contest, by all means let the emphasis be placed where it belongs. The fact is that university debating of late has in some few quarters made notable advance in the direction of the open forum type of discussion, audience decision on the merits of the question, the use of split teams, etc. These changes cannot be interpreted except as efforts to do away with insincerity. Sooner or later they will seep down into the secondary schools.

The chief remedy, however, for insincerity in debate does not lie in the adoption of one or another of the devices just mentioned. It lies rather in the insistence, in season and out of season, upon absolute sincerity. That was a wise word once spoken by Professor Sumner of Yale: "We cannot express opinions which we do not honestly entertain, even in jest, without straining our sense of truth, and losing the delicacy of our sense of right." To proclaim ideas of the truth of which we are not fully convinced works a subtle injury to our inner integrity. When Woodrow Wilson was a senior in Princeton he refused, when drawn by lot, to defend the tariff side of the question, free trade versus tariff for protection, declaring that he was for free trade and that as he could not argue against his convictions, there could be no force or sincerity behind what he said, should he speak as directed. This action prabably cost him a prize and lost the debate for his hall. It was this same youth who in an earlier essay on 'The Orator," referring to Edward Bright's firm and constant ideals, declared that "to an orator this atmosphere of sincerity and honest conviction is a mighty power."

Insincerity is by no means confined to debating. Someone has recently said that the temptation to argue plausibly for any case because of self-interest is a major problem of a democracy. To expect young persons to argue from public platforms for or against certain issues without reference to conviction or belief is offensive both to common honesty and to common sense. So long as this habit continues, school debating can hardly escape the charge of insincerity.

Editorial Notes

In presenting the Massachusetts State budget for the year it was explained that the state debt had been reduced in ten years from $40,433,000 to $14,500,000 chiefly because of a pay-as-yougo policy and of inheritance taxes. The fact that the latter votaled $10,740,000 in one year makes astonishing, to put it mildly, the argument to abolish this tax as a source of revenue scarcely worth bothering with.

While Germany did not win a first place in the competitions of the recent Olympic winter sports meet at St. Moritz, Switzerland, it had the honor of leading the parade in which the athletes of the competing nations marched in alphabetical order. French spelling was used to determine positions, so that Germany, or "Allemagne," captured first place, with Argentina a close second.

While on the subject of "vanishing Americans" why not include the tintypes in the family album, and the crayon portraits that hung on the parlor walls?

Gold Standard or Dollar Standard?

By PROP. IRVING FISHER

REGINALD McKENNA, former Chancellor of the British Exchequer, in his recent address to the shareholders of the Midland Bank Limited, stated that world prices are no longer determined by the supply of gold, but are based upon the purchasing power of the United States dollar. This is no new doctrine. Mr. McKenna has been saying this for two years and more, but his recent address seems to have troubled the financial waters in both Great Britain and the United States as they have never been troubled before. Comment, commendation, and condemnation are being poured out upon him from all quarters.

Addition of such enlarged credits, B. M. Anderson, economist of the Chase National Bank, also holds that there has been no withholding of gold from utilisation. All these writers insist that the huge importation of gold in the United States has resulted in price inflation. The inflation has not been shown in wholesale commodity prices, but has manifested itself in unprecedented and unhealthy increases in the prices of stocks and bonds and of real estate. These writers maintain that all the gold in the United States is either earmarked for the foreign owners, or is the basis of loans and discounts up to, and even beyond, the limit of safety. They express much apprehension as that world prices are no longer determined by the supply of gold, but are based upon the purchasing power of the United States dollar. This is no new doctrine. Mr. Mchis recent address seems to have troubled the financial waters in both Great Britain and the United States as him from all quarters.

Mr. McKenna holds that the paper-standard countries of the world which have "stabilized" their currencies theoretically upon the gold standard have really done nothing of the sort. They have stabilized not upon the gold standard, but upon the dollar standard.

The reader may say, "What is the difference? The dollar is the gold standard. When a country stabilizes its currency upon the dollar, that country at once goes upon the gold standard."

"But there is a difference. Mr. McKenna and many others maintain that the federal reserve system has "sterilized" a large part of the huge imports of gold into the United States and, by so doing, has prevented prices from increasing as they otherwise would have done. The surplus gold, that is, the excess over and above the monetary and credit needs of business, has been gathered into the vaults of the federal reserve banks, especially the New York Reserve Bank, and has thus been held out of circulation and impounded, as it were. Instead of being used by the 30,000 banks in the United States as the basis of credit expansion, gold has been piled up in the reserve banks.

One school of economists holds that the value of the dollar is determined by the supply of and demand for gold in the arts. Its value as money is assumed to be secondary and fixed by the value of gold in jewelry. This theory of money is ridiculously inadequate and inaccurate today. It never did have much validity. The utility of gold as money has, for several centuries at least, been more important in determining its value than its utility

Before the World War, gold was the foundation of the currency systems in all the most important industrial countries. The credit instruments based upon gold depended for their value primarily upon their convertibility into gold.

Today, the situation has been practically reversed. Gold, while nominally the basis for the currency systems of the world, has been superseded almost entirely as a medium of exchange in commercial transactions. The prodigious volume of credit theoretically based upon gold has grown so huge that it now determines the value of the gold monetary units upon which it is nominally based and in terms of which it is expressed. Under a central banking system, the central bank can and does, through its credit policy, expand and contract the volume of credit, thereby decreasing and increasing the value of the gold monetary units at will. In short, gold as money or as jewelry no longer determines the value of the credit currency based upon it. Today, credit determines the value of gold.

This is what Mr. McKenna means when he says that it is the dollar, not gold, which rules prices throughout the world today and that the European countries have stabilized their currency not upon gold but upon the dollar basis. The contention of Mr. McKenna has been vigorously disputed by some economists and bankers in the United States.

Harry A. E. Chandler of the National Bank of Commerce insists that the federal reserve system has not sterilized gold and that credits based upon gold have expanded right up to the limit of safety. This view is also expressed by H. F. Boettler of the St. Louis First National Bank, who contends that the federal reserve system could not, if it would, sterilize gold and prevent credit expansion by the full utilization of gold as a foun-

the limit of safety. They express much apprehension as to the results which would follow any considerable expor-tation of gold. Credit would be contracted, they say, and, in all likelihood, a severe financial and industrial crisis would result.

The holders of these views have a good deal to explain. The huge reserves piled up in the federal reserve banks are by no means all earmarked for foreign owners, nor have credits been based upon them to the limit per-missible by law. It is estimated that individual deposits missible by law. It is estimated that individual deposits could be expanded at least 50 per cent beyond the existing amount, and still keep within the 35 per cent reserve limit for deposits. In addition, there are $1,800,000,000 of gold certificates in circulation which could be withdrawn and replaced by federal reserve notes, backed by commercial paper instead of gold.

It has been the deliberate policy of the federal reserve system and the United States Treasury to withhold federal reserve notes from circulation and to issue these gold certificates, which are exactly like warehouse receipts.

crair reserve notes from circulation and to issue these gold certificates, which are exactly like warehouse receipts, based dollar for dollar upon gold deposited with the United States Treasury. The contention that credit has been expanded to the limit permissible in the United States cannot be successfully substantiated.

We must conclude, then, that Mr. McKenna's statement is in the main sound, although it probably exaggerates the power of the federal reserve system as a world gerates the power of the federal reserve system as a world stabilizer. The United States at present possesses but little less than half the monetary supply existing in the world. With this huge supply of gold it is possible for the federal reserve system, within limits, to control the value of the dollar by expanding or contracting credit at will, and this policy has been in operation since 1922. The Federal Reserve Board and the governors of the federal reserve banks have a great responsibility resting upon their shoulders and they are fully cognizant of this respon-

The United States, with the whole world, owes to them a debt of gratitude which can never be paid, for the wisdom with which they have managed the activities of the reserve system and the banks. At present they are being importuned from the one side to boost the rediscount rate for the purpose of curbing speculation and, from the other side, to lower the discount rate so as to encourage the expansion of industrial loans and to increase the purchasing power of manufacturers and consumers, thus strengthening commodity prices.

These financial statesmen in charge of the biggest central banking organization in the world are doing their best to control unhealthy speculation through the con-trol of brokers' loans, and, at the same time, to encourage healthy business enterprises. Their efforts should receive the intelligent support of legislators, economists, bankers and business men, not only in the United States but throughout the world.

It is a very delicate and dangerous business for them It is a very delicate and dangerous business for them to determine just what discount policy they should at this time advocate. They know the problem facing them and are using the tremendous power of the federal reserve system with wise forethought and judgment to prevent too easy money, inflation and speculative expansion on the one hand, or tight money, contraction of credits and business depression, on the other. The knowledge that this great organized power exists and is being directed samply toward desirable economic and a premise. directed sanely toward desirable economic ends promotes confidence and acts as a powerful stabilizer of prices and business in the United States and throughout the world.

Cooling Off the Tropics

A PAIR of French engineers propose to cool off the tropics, which we would remark will be "some job." The working details are not yet to hand and therefore we cannot explain the actual process, but what it will take to cool off that heated mid-slice of the world the French experts have found, and found it near enough to the place of utilization for efficiency, always provided of course that the Gallic gentlemen can turn the trick. It is well known that deep beneath the tepid surface of the tropic seas there flow thither from the arctic and antarctic ice packs currents of water chronically just above the freezing point. It is these streams that in some manner unexplained, the engineer would bring to the surface there to change the climate of tropic lands so as to render them not only pleasantly habitable but also workable.

Not so long ago another Frenchman promised to run engines by the differences in temperature between the surface and the depths of the tropic oceans, so it is clear that France has her eye on a promising possibility of making the old ocean serve. — New Orleans Times. Picayune.

"A Decent Day's Work"

TF AT the end of the day you can say that you have A caused no unhappiness to any one you have met, that you have lessened no one's belief in life or mankind, that you have helped the discouraged and added nothing to the vanity of the ostentatious, then you have done a decent day's work .- London Express.

A Good Example

SIR WILLIAM MULOCK, the veteran chief justice of Ontario, has made an outstanding success of planting trees. Years ago he started to plant black walnut trees farm near Toronto, and he has now three groves containing 45,000 black walnut trees, some of them well on their way to maturity, when they will be worth $100 or more each. This means that Sir William has a fortune in sight of upward of $5,000,000. It is just a little instance of what can be done by reforestation in the denuded sections of the country. — Brantford (Ont.) Ex-

LJARBIN—Authorities here have been asked by cable 11 to keep a sharp look-out for a monoplane entitled, "History and Principles of St. Joseph, Mo.," which is due at this city next year in a trip around the world. The cablegram was lacking in details, but it was gathered that the "History and Principles of St. Joseph, Mo.," is to be crated in New York and shipped direct to Tokyo via Siberia.

A movement to have the city go en fete on the arrival of the plane has been successfully defeated.

[The foregoing dispatch from Harbin is apparently elightly confused. It is known that St. Joseph, Mo., is sending a plane around the world, but the name of the plane is certified to be "Solidarity, Continuity and Many Happy Returns of the Day from St. Joseph, Mo." According to one representative of the flight, the plane will positively be uncrated in Tokyo and one of the wings left here as a souvenir from Mayor Louis V, Stigall of St.

Joseph, to Mayor Nishikubo, of Tokyo. The plane will continue its flight with only one wing as a testimonial to the pioneer spirit which helped to found St. Joseph and make it today one of the premier cities of the midwest, fifth in candy production, fourth in hard-wheat flour and just under Akron, O., in bank clearings.].—Tokyo Trans-

A Merchant Marine in Private Hands To THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR:

As builder of the navy's newest and fastest airplane carrier, Saratoga, I venture to suggest for your informa-tion an aspect of the current discussion in Congress regarding the Merchant Marine. The almost complete collapse of the Merchant Marine of the United States is a well-known fact. Excluding ships carry less than 10 per cent of the Nation's oceanorne trade. Even this slight proportion is decreasing alarmingly in the face of the competition of better, faster, newer foreign ships.

The American people, almost with one voice, demand an adequate American Merchant Marine. With almost equal unanimity they insist that it must be restored by equal unanimity they insist that it must be solved, private enterprise and without a Government subsidy. Although the Senate in passing the Jones bill emphasized the demand for a merchant fleet and the public dislike of subsidies for private persons, nevertheless it violated the people's desire for private operation.

The House is considering several bills—the White bill, the Wood bill and others. Like the Jones bill, these satisfy only two of the three demands of the people, They would establish a merchant marine in private hands. But they seek to do this by some form of subsidy. The plan which my associates and I presented to the Shipping Board on Jan. 24, initially for six large 35-knot transatiantic liners, four-day boats dock-to-dock with airplane landing decks, offers a way to satisfy all three desires of the American people by building and operating American super-ships in private ownership without a subsidy. President Coolidge, in the newspapers of Feb. 8, publicly indorsed this particular proposal The Shipping Board has unanimously recommended to Congress precisely the legislative amendments required to make this project possible. This plan was not ready for presentation in time to affect the vote on the Jones bill in the Senate. I call this to your notice only because the passage of the Jones bill may have left the impression that private enterprise will not enter the shipping business if it cannot get a subsidy.

We have formed the Transoceanic Corporation to build and operate an American foreign service without a subsidy. The Shipping Board must maintain essential routes as at present and keep its valuable reserve fleet, which it has used with such powerful effect to prevent foreign discriminations against American shippers. We ask a foan of three-fourths the cost of building our

we ask a loan of three-fourths the cost of building our ships, to be repaid in twenty years, on which we will pay exactly what the money costs the Government. By this arrangement the Government will lose nothing. It will have, moreover, at its service, if required, a fleet of six or more very fast airplane carriers, each with a crew trained in the school of daily commercial service.

We also ask a long-term mail-carrying contract at rates based on the better service rendered. These ships will cut the ocean mail time by one-half, and with the use of airplanes at each end of the voyage will give a three-day mail service.
We submit that this new ocean service will give an impulse to the re-establishment of the entire American Merchant Marine. LAURENCE R. WILDER.
